

Eni is named the best international company for online financial and corporate communications

The outcome of the fourteenth edition of Hallvarsson & Halvarsson's survey puts Eni at the top

San Donato Milanese (Milan), 27 January 2011 – Eni has been named the leading international company for online financial and corporate communications, in the fourteenth edition of Hallvarsson & Halvarsson's survey of major international companies operating in 28 different industries.

This year, Eni has set a double record in the survey which is acknowledged as the widest field of research on online financial and corporate communications (950 companies assessed, 571 professionals interviewed and 127 evaluation criteria adopted). For the third year in a row, Eni ranks first in the H&H Webranking Europe 500, consisting of Europe's top 500 listed companies for market capitalization in the FT Europe 500 ranking. Furthermore, Eni also tops the new H&H Webranking Global 100, which is made of the major 100 international listed companies for market capitalization in the FT Global 100.

The outcome of the H&H survey confirms Eni's ongoing commitment to communicating with its stakeholders through the web, in a transparent and complete manner, according to different targets. This outstanding result follows another important success reached last October when, for the second year in a row, Eni was named the world's best company in the online communication of CSR operations at the CSR Online Awards Global Leaders 2010. These awards confirm the strong commitment of the company to pursuing sustainable development in every single aspect of its activities.
