Eni: Official Platinum Sponsor of the Italian Pavilion at Expo 2020 Dubai

Signed the partnership agreement between the company and the Italian Commissioner's Office for the Universal Expo

Rome/San Donato Milanese (Milan), 19 April

Eni announces its participation to Expo 2020 in Dubai as “Platinum Sponsor” of the Italian Pavilion, where the company will illustrate its innovation-led decarbonisation strategy applied to the whole energy supply chain.

The company will take part in the Italian Pavilion with a project installation created by the innovation and design studio CRA-Carlo Ratti Associati and Italo Rota, that recreates artistically a microalgae cultivation by using a cascade of technological liana vines, up to 20 meters long. Through each of the LED lit lianas flow the microalgae: the see-through circuit therefore becomes a spectacular exhibition of microalgae biologic process and growth in the photobioreactor where, feeding on CO₂, these unicellular organisms produce high-value nutritional compounds and more.

Eni's commitment towards energy transition takes shape by focusing on technological innovation to find new solutions for the lowest carbon impact in energy production. Thanks to the collaboration with over 70 Universities and Research Centres globally, Eni is developing new technologies for decarbonisation, renewable energies and circular economy, all of which will be illustrated in the Eni area at Expo 2020, with a dedicated video schedule and with the company participation in events and talks throughout the whole exhibition semester.
