

Eni for Italy: 30% discount from Plenitude compared with the standard electricity and gas offer and prices fixed for two years

San Donato Milanese (Milan), 29 September 2026 – Following the introduction of a price cap on diesel and gasoline at Enilive stations, the Eni Group is providing further support to Italian households through the Eni for Italy initiative, aimed at helping citizens cope with high energy prices.

The Group will offer, starting from 1 October and to those customers who subscribe to the offer through Plenitude by 24 October, a 30% discount on electricity and gas rates compared with its main fixed-price offer with prices fixed for two years, while also keeping commodity prices unchanged and thus bearing the recent increases in procurement costs. This discount is worth approximately €100 per year on the gas contract and the same amount on the electricity contract, for a total of approximately €200 for those customers who choose both supplies^[1].

Plenitude will also assess any further measures to support consumers depending on the evolution of market scenarios.

^[1] Annual expenditure for Fixa Time 24 Smart vs Fixa Time 24 Base from 1 October, calculated on the basis of one year's electricity expenditure, excluding taxes, for a primary residence with the following characteristics (3 kW, 2,000 kWh/year) and one year's gas expenditure relating to a typical Plenitude customer (600 Smc/year).
